COURSE OVERVIEW

The Basic Public Affairs Specialist-Writer course is designed for enlisted members of all services, qualified civilians and selected international military students. During the 12-week course, students learn to communicate through the print medium. The course is performance-based and combines instruction in writing, photojournalism and public affairs.

Students demonstrated their print journalism proficiency by producing a 32-page newspaper called The Final Cut. Class 030-07 experienced all aspects of the publication process: writing and editing stories, photography, design and layout. Their comprehension of Public Affairs was tested during a field training exercise that required them to apply their skills in real-life scenario-based training.
